

The Miner.

THE MYSTERY OF NATURE

The works of God are fair for naught,
Unless our eyes, in seeing,
See hidden in the thing the thought
That animates the being.

The outward form is not the whole,
But every part is moulded
To image forth an inward soul,
That dimly is unfolded.

The shadow, pictured in the lake
By every tree that trembles,
Is cast for more than just the sake
Of that which it resembles.

The dew falls nightly, not alone,
Because the meadows need it,
But on an errand of its own,
To human souls that heed it.

The stars are lighted in the skies,
Not merely for their shining,
But, like looks of loving eyes,
Have meanings worth divining.

The waves that moan along the shore,
The winds that sigh in blowing,
Are sent to teach a mystic lore
Which men are wise in knowing.

The clouds around the mountain peak,
The rivers in their winding,
Have secrets, which to all who seek,
Are secrets in the finding.

Thus nature dwells within our reach,
But though we stand so near her,
We still interpret half her speech
With ears too dull to hear her.

Whoever, at the earnest sound,
Still listens for the finest,
Shall hear the noisy world go round
To music the divinest.

Whoever yearns to see aright
Because his heart is tender,
Shall catch a glimpse of heavenly light
In every earthly splendor.

So, since the universe began,
And till it shall be ended,
The soul of nature, soul of man,
And soul of God are blended.

The man who never failed is a myth. Such a one never lived and is never likely to. All success is a series of efforts, in which, when closely viewed, is seen more or less failures. The mountain is apt to overcloud the hill, but the hill is a reality nevertheless. If you fail now and then, don't be discouraged. Bear in mind it is only the part and experience of every successful man; and the most successful men often have the most failures.

LARGE AND MAGNIFICENT.—The Escorial is the palace of the Kings of Spain, one of the largest and most magnificent in the world. It was commenced by Philip II, in the year 1562, and the first cost of its erection was six millions of ducats. It forms a vast square of polished stone, paved with marble. It may give some notion of the surprising grandeur of this palace to observe, that according to the computation of Francisco de los Santos, it would take up more than four days to go through all its rooms and apartments; the length of the way being reckoned 22 Spanish leagues, which is about 120 English miles. There are 14,000 doors and 11,000 windows belonging to this edifice.

TO CLEAN HAIR.—Take one ounce of borax and half an ounce of camphor, powder fine, and dissolve in one quart of boiling water; when cool, the solution will be fit for use, and with it you should damp the hair frequently. This wash effectually cleanses, beautifies and strengthens the hair, preserves the color, and prevents it from falling off. The camphor will, after being dissolved, form into lumps again, but that will be of no consequence, as the water will have been sufficiently impregnated.

SALT AND ASHES FOR HORSES.—Those keeping horses should twice a week, throw in to each a handful of salt and ashes. Mix them by putting in three parts of salt to one of ashes. Horses relish this, and it will keep their hair soft and fine. It will also prevent bots, colic, etc. A little ground sulphur, mixed with salt and ashes, and given once in two or three weeks, is also beneficial. All domestic animals will be thus benefited.

CHANGE OF BEAUTY.—"How on earth did you happen to be so ugly," asked a person of a very remarkably ugly looking friend of his. "I, ugly?" was the reply. "It isn't I that am ugly. I was born beautiful; but my nurse swapped me when I was a little baby, for the child of a friend of hers, whose mother didn't fancy him handsome."

A TON OF HAY BY MEASURE.—It is a matter of considerable dispute how much hay in the mow ought to be allowed, as a ton in weight. In some of the agricultural journals figures widely apart are given as correct. Some assert that a cube of 10 feet square is required, or 1,000 cubic feet; others place it as low as 6 feet square and 3 feet deep, or only 392 cubic feet. Now, both of these cannot be right, neither can any measure be fixed upon to hold good under all circumstances. Hay at the bottom of the mow, will be more solid than at the surface, and the whole will be very much affected by the quantity of grain put on top of it (if any) and the depth of the hay.

But, having occasion to sell a ton in my barn, to be sure of the quantity, for future reference, I measured off a space 8 feet square on one corner of the mow, and cut down 7 feet deep, and found the hay removed weighed 2,030 pounds, thus making 488 cubic feet, a good measure for a ton of hay. It was taken from the surface, upon which 200 dozen sheaves of good oats had been stored. The hay was 12 feet deep.

In this county, when hay is sold in the barn, it is generally calculated 392 feet to the ton, which I am confident will always fall short. On the contrary, 448 is as near the correct number as actual trial will give me.—Correspondent Germantown Telegraph.

The New York Herald has the following: "A gentleman called upon one of our department clerks yesterday to order the paper. He said, 'Confound the Herald. I have stopped it six times on account of its politics, and now I have to order it again!'"

THE YES BUT GENERATION.—One pines for an apple orchard; his wife can't have any preserves, as she used to. Another cannot forget the convenience of light wood knots and spring water, and longs for a Carolina sand-bank, where he can make five or six bushels of nubbins corn per acre. Some have more considerable objections. Here is the substance of a conversation with a well-to-do person:

'This is a great country you live in,' said I.
'Yes, but it's so far to town, or anywhere,' was the reply.
'You have fine roads; I never saw their equal.'

'Yes; but it's terrible travelling when it rains.'

'I never saw better beef than yours.'

'Yes; but people don't want to eat nothing but beef.'

'Such a delightful climate—your health is good.'

'Yes; but the northerners are awful on the constitution.'

'Your land is rich; and it produces so abundantly.'

'Yes; but the grasshoppers have eat up my green patch.'

'Your hogs will fatten on the grasshoppers.'

'Yes; but it worries 'em to death to catch the things.'

'Your chickens are lively—they can catch them.'

'Yes; but it makes their meat taste—so they say.'

By this time there was a twinkle of humor in the turn things had taken, and I took leave. "Good-by, my inconsolable friend—may you come to a more cheerful mind—good-by till we meet again."

'Yes; but we may never meet again in this world.'

And I rather hope we won't. Deliver me from the "yes-but" generation—a people who love to be miserable, and who take pleasure in taking the other side against Providence.

HOW TO BECOME A MILLIONAIRE.—The writer of an article in the Galaxy on the New York millionaires thus sums up what is to be done by a man who would join the order:

You must be a very able man, as nearly all millionaires are.

You must devote your life to the getting and keeping of other men's earnings.

You must eat the bread of carefiness, and you must rise early and lie down late.

You must care little or nothing about other men's wants, or sufferings or disappointments.

You must not mind it that your great wealth involves many others' poverty.

You must not give away money, except for a material equivalent.

You must not go meandering about nature, nor spend your time enjoying air, earth, sky and water, for there is no money in it.

You must not distract your thoughts from the great purpose of your life with the charms of art and literature.

You must not let philosophy or religion engross you during the secular time.

You must not allow your wife or children to occupy much of your valuable time or thoughts.

You must never permit the fascinations of friendship to inveigle you into making loans, however small. You must abandon all other ambitions or purposes; and finally—

You must be prepared to sacrifice ease and all fanciful notions you may have about tastes, and luxuries, and enjoyments, during most, if not all of your natural life.

If you think the game is worth the candle, you can die rich—some of you can.

A STAR IN A NEW FIRMAMENT.—A good but characteristic thing is told of our ancient friend and brother, Forbes, whilom of the Register, and late of the Virginia Tresspass. Forbes is going to White Pine. Well, there's nothing strange or unusual about that, as every body is going to White Pine who can pay for a ticket by Wells, Fargo & Co., but when Forbes made it known that he was bound for that attractive locality, his friends wanted to know what he intended to call his new paper; was it to be radical or copperhead, or each by turns and nothing long. "Paper be d—d," said Forbes one day to a party of intimate friends, "look here, gentlemen, I have tried the paper business now about twenty years, and find to my grief that only about one man in twenty ever reads a newspaper, while nineteen out of every twenty drink tarantula juice. Now I have tried the one patron in twenty long enough, and intend to try the nineteen a while. I am going to start a "whisky mill," drinks two bits for all who have the coin." Success to you, old boy! We will send you the Register to keep your morals right, and prevent you from falling from grace.—Humboldt Register.

AN OLD MAID'S WAIL.—"Tis wondrous strange how great the change since I was in my teens; then I had a beau, and a billet-doux, and joined the gayest scenes. But lovers now have ceased to vow; no way they now contrive—to poison, hang or drown themselves—because I'm thirty-five. Once, if the night was ever so bright, I ne'er abroad could roam, without—"the bliss, the honor, Miss, of seeing you safe home." But now I go, through rain and snow—fatigued and scarce alive—through all the dark, without a spark—because I'm thirty-five.

IX Cromwell's time, the press groaned (the people must have groaned too) over such books as these: "A Spiritual Mustard-pot to make the soul sneeze with devotion," or worse still, "A Sigh of Sorrow for the Sinners of Zion breathed out of a hole in the wall of an earthly vessel known among men by the name of Samuel Fish."

POLITICS.—Simply a great game. Ostensible object, government of the country. Real object, self-aggrandizement. Those most ready to propose themselves as governors of others are those least capable of governing themselves. Patriotism is a trade.—Ex.

Josh Billings thinks most enny man, will concede that it loox very foolish to see a boy drag a heavy splay up a steep hill for the fleetin' pleasure of riding down again; but it appears to me that a boy is a sage by the side of the yung man hoo works hard all the week and drinks his stamps up Saturday nite.
